

'The Don' Award

In 1998, The Sport Australia Hall of Fame created 'The Don' award, named after Sir Donald Bradman, to honour a current Australian athlete who, by their achievements and example over the last 12 months, are considered to have had the capacity to most inspire the nation.

Athletes who have won the award are not Inducted into the Hall of Fame; however, once they have retired from the highest level of competition they become eligible for nomination, the same as all other athletes. Teams or team performances are considered.
